Hi, please review the attached skin photo and provide your most likely diagnosis step by step.

<think> Based on the detailed description of the skin findings, here is my step-by-step reasoning:

1. Location: The affected area is hairy, likely an extremity. This helps..
2. Primary Lesion Type: Multiple erythematous (red) lesions are....
3. Key Morphological Feature - Annularity: Several lesions exhibit an annular morphology and some of..
4. Surface Characteristics: This is evident on the lesions, particularly...
5. Differential Diagnosis: Combining these features - erythematous and..
6. Synthesis: While annular lesions immediately suggest ringworm, the combination of features.....

</think> Based on the described appearance and location, the most likely final diagnosis for your skin condition is eczema nummular.
